The Field Guide to Embroidery

52 North American Animal and Plant Designs for Nature Lovers Jessica Kemper

Organized according to seven North American ecosystems – desert, mountain, forest, waterways, prairie, ocean and urban – the 52 beautifully accurate designs by naturalist Jessica Kemper include popular species (think bears, manatees and river otters) and some that are less well known or are potentially threatened. Beginner-level patterns coexist with intermediate and advanced patterns to appeal to all embroidery lovers looking for stunning new designs. Learn the materials, stitches (including the one-of-a-kind fur stitch, which renders mammal fur beautifully!) and techniques to complete an embroidery project from start to finish. The simpler designs require just a few hours. Measuring approximately 75 to 100mm, the creatures are perfect to adorn any stitchable surface.

Indigo From Plant to Pigment:Tie-Dye and Style Your Own Way

Douglas Luhanko & Kerstin Neumuller

This book contains all the information you need to use natural or synthetic indigo, alongside a wealth of dying recipes with other plants and textile ideas. In the first chapter, learn how to grow indigo yourself, whether you have a windowsill or a full garden. No matter where you live, the authors provide gardening tips for the best species of indigo for your area. From there, a variety of different dyeing techniques are explained to achieve your desired results. A chapter explaining the science behind the dye also troubleshoots any problems to help you experiment further. Finally, the projects section includes guides on how to use your dyed textiles to create intricate moyo-sashi and hitome-sashi embroidery, patchwork quilts or resist-dyed patterns.

Connecting Threads Tactile Social History Lynne Setterington

Connecting Threads brings together twelve textile projects completed between 1981 and 2024. Each one acts as a social history document, providing tactile evidence of often untold stories of people on the margins, unexamined histories and overlooked places, all through stitch. The projects described in this book encompass themes of identity and belonging, health and wellbeing, sustainability, community cohesion and social inequality, offering sensory testaments of life today. Unusually, in a career that has garnered international recognition, Lynne Setterington remains modest, committed to the next collaboration, the sharing of textile languages, the rituals of ordinary life.
